

Common murre eggs

In Iceland it is common that Auk eggs and therefore Common Murre eggs are stolen and eaten by humans in the spring. The Common Murre lays one egg between may and july, after laying the egg the parents incubate the egg for 32-33 days.

Menntamálastofnun. (2017). Langvía. Sótt af <https://fuglavefur.is/birdinfo.php?val=4&id=49>